"Clinging to the cross, supposes that I have let go everything else, and that I throw my arms around it, and venture the whole weight of my eternal interests upon it. Clinging to the cross, intimates that I have both arms at liberty—that I turn my back on everything else, and facing it—I clasp it with a firm grasp, as a drowning mariner would a broken mast that was floating by his side."

James Smith, 1857

Presidential Pre-Election Prayer

The following is an excerpt from a Presidential Pre-Election Prayer by Al Mohler...

"May God grant us mercy and grace as we seek to fulfill our responsibilities as citizens—and our responsibilities as Christians. This world is not our home, but we do bear responsibilities as followers of Christ as we are living here. May God bless America, not because this nation deserves to be blessed, but because He is a God of grace and mercy. Oh God . . . save us from ourselves."
